Description :

Prsentation de l'diteurDrawing on years of experience as a McKinsey Co associate partner and then as the leader of the French Administration Reform during the Sarkozy administration, François-Daniel Migeon gives us critical keys to the inner path towards becoming an exceptional leader. Already proven with over 500 corporate executives, François-Daniel helps the reader experience that his or her leadership is ignited when he or she: i) connects with his or her own sense of purpose, ii) is capable of distinguishing carefully between a self-serving relationship and a peer-to-peer relationship, and iii) is aware of his or her own responsibility of living by the insights drawn from the first two alignments. The book is a self-learning tool with practical but transforming exercises, which will get the reader started on a far reaching leadership development journey. The target audience for this book includes managers or leaders who are facing significant changes in their business and are willing to achieve a higher level of performance while being totally authentic. Inner Leadership is clearly different from current leadership literature in the fact that it goes beyond behavioral tips. It helps the reader gain in-depth self-knowledge and awareness of others. As a result, the book provides an unusual reading experience and one that can bring about true personal transformation as well as economic growth.
